AT THE ENTRANCE OF THE LACE DEPARTMENT of the Exposition Universale a Paris, the most attractive and brilliant are the black lace points, colfs, reils and markillas, from the house of Stoquare Isroihers, of Gayrmmont. They had previously distinguished themselves at the various exhibitions on this continent, but their grand exhibition at the Orestal Paiace in London consolidated their regulation. The articles are numerous and varied, and are delanguished for their clearness and beauty of design, and the superiority of the execution renders them the most incomparable and charming of works. In their present grand display, a superb shawl, of black Brussels lace, sixtracts universal admiration; the design is rich and claborate, consisting of the arms of France, with the cyphers of their Imperial Majesties.—Prom L'Indépendance a Brussela.
